Should the contest develop into a prize fight it would, of course, be the duty of the sheriff to stop it." This opinion was rendered by the Attorney General this afternoon on the question of the proposed Wolcott-McFarland bout scheduled at Milwaukee for Friday.

WANDERED OFF FROM HOME IN THE WEST

Herbert Leake, Who Was Taken to Mendota Yesterday, Came Here From Mt. Vernon, Wash.

Possessed of a fear of bodily harm, especially in a crowd, Herbert Leake of Mt. Vernon, Washington, sought refuge Sunday night with Sheriff H. H. Hanson at the county jail, claiming he had escaped from a crowd at the depot who desired to injure him. After talking with the man the sheriff became convinced that he was mentally unbalanced and Mrs. W. H. Judd and L. W. Edden examined him as to his sanity, declaring the man insane. He was taken to Mendota yesterday and will probably be sent to Mt. Vernon.

Leake was a former resident of the town of Harmony but has resided in Mt. Vernon for the past fourteen or fifteen years. He evidently prospered since his residence there, as during rational moments he spoke of property he owned there. He left his home and bought a ticket for St. Paul. The delusion, which caused him to go to the sheriff, however, has kept him from traveling all the way and he walked a part of the distance. When he arrived he had seven or eight dollars in money, a note for $200, and a partially used ticket for St. Paul.

The case seems to be similar to that of Carroll Smith, who disappeared about two months ago, after leaving his home north of Milton to come to Janesville. Leake looked up his home and went away suddenly leaving no word as to where he was going. Sheriff Hanson sent a telegram to the sheriff at Mt. Vernon, informing the latter that Leake had been found so that any worry the man's disappearance might have caused would be allayed.

MRS. HOFFMAN GAVE STIRRING ADDRESS AT MEETING TODAY

PRESIDENT OF COUNTY W. C. T. U. EMPHASIZED LOVE OF FELLOW MEN IN SPEECH THIS MORNING.

OFFICERS ARE NAMED

All Were Re-Elected With Exception of Treasurer for Which Mrs. Dickinson Was Named.—Meeting Last Night.

With love for our fellowmen as the central thought of her address at the morning meeting of the second day of the W. C. T. U., today, Mrs. Rose M. Hoffman, of Beloit, president of the organization in Rock county, stirred the audience with an interesting and instructive speech. Denouncing the coldness too often found in the world and emphasizing the necessity of more of the warmth of true love as is taught by the Man of Galilee, President Hoffman told many little incidents illustrating the harm that may be done by this coldness, and the good that results when the warmth and cheer of friendship is manifested.

Mrs. Hoffman endorsed the methods used by Judge Lindsey in his work of reforming youths who have gone astray and stated that it is her firm conviction that local court officials and policemen could do more good for the community if they would adopt similar plans. Instead of bringing young men into court when they are found to be the victims of the drunk habit, she would have the officers open their hearts toward those unfortunate young men and show them the error of their ways as a true friend should do instead of bringing them in to the court. She would not have the drunkard condemned but rather pitied for the weakness that he is not able to combat. Because he has fallen under the weight of temptation he should not be condemned for, as she said, any one might show the same weakness if all the same weight were placed on his shoulders. The course of her address was of an informal nature.

At the close of her appeal it was announced that news was received to the effect that the state of Maine had gone dry. This announcement was received with cheers by the audience and their satisfaction was manifested in their singing "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow," and "Rejoice Ye Again," all of the company joining in the singing.

Officers Elected.
Following the president's address, was the election of officers. All of the officers for the past year were re-elected with the exception of the treasurer, Mrs. Nellie West, of Milton Junction, who is now absent from the state and expects to remain away for some time, making it impossible for her to accept the office.

The officers are: President, Mrs. Rose M. Hoffman, Beloit; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. George Jacobs, Janesville; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Mattie E. West, Milton Junction; and Treasurer, Mrs. Cora E. Dickinson, Janesville.

Superintendents of the various departments of work conducted throughout the county by this organization are:

Session Last Evening.
Following the opening hymn, scripture and prayer, at the convention meeting last evening, Mrs. Daley Athey of Janesville gave a short address of welcome to the visiting delegates. She declared that the person who stood in her place should have been the mayor of Janesville but the delegates were denied that honor. The welcome extended was nevertheless sincere and the speaker expressed the hope that the many things for which the Union stood would be more widely heralded as a result of this convention.

Mrs. H. B. Osborn of Milton responded to the address in behalf of the delegates. She stated that there had been a time when the Women's Christian Temperance Union was not accorded the hearty and sincere greeting that it is today. It was not understood then what the purpose of the organization was and the great force which it was destined to exert for the uplift of humanity everywhere.

One Department's Work.
"There are forty departments in the W. C. T. U.," said the speaker, "and if the only work which they had accomplished amounted only to what has been done in matter of education of the young in our schools, the Union might feel well satisfied. We own much to Mary H. Hunt of Boston, who went before every state legislature in the nation and secured laws providing for the scientific instruction of the young in the effects of alcohol and alcoholic liquors on the human system."

Following this address several demonstrations conducted by members of the various department were presented to show the work of the Union along some of the different lines. Mrs. Hoffman, president of the county organization, gave a brief talk on the evangelistic side of the work. She expressed the thought that the saloon evil arose from the yearning for fellowship and companionship on the part of lonesome men. They went to the saloon to see somebody and talk to somebody, not because they were morally bad.

It remained then to satisfy this yearning in some good and wholesome way; to provide better homes; to offer attractions in other directions; and this was part of the great work of the W. C. T. U.

Other Demonstrations.
Mrs. Addie Peckles of Janesville, gave a brief talk on the work of the Union at fairs throughout the country. They usually provided a dining hall at each fair grounds and served the needs of the public in a material way. If not a dining hall, they furnished a woman's rest room, which made a place for tired mothers to come and have a brief hour of quiet. These places gave an opportunity for the spreading of the W. C. T. U. literature and heralding their message all over the land.

Work in the prisons and almshouses was graphically illustrated by a short dialogue which was prepared and conducted under the supervision of Mrs. Geo. Miller of this city. The work of the department for the mother and child was also portrayed in a short dialogue and was given under the direction of Mrs. Elsie Hield. It was brought out that the Union was a place of instruction regarding the rearing of children and where children could be brought to the mothers' meetings and provided for.

Another dialogue was presented by several boys of the Jefferson school prepared and given under the direction of Miss Carrie Nelson, one of the teachers in the Jefferson building. The Flower Mission department was represented by a very excellent dialogue given by the boys of the school. It brought out very clearly the purpose of the work in the section, and the recreation was very well given.

A number of musical selections were given during the program last evening including one by the members of the local Loyal Temperance Legion.

The program last evening closed with a drill by the Loyal Temperance Legion of this city. The exercise was very creditably given and drew forth merited applause. Those who took part in the drill were:

Florence Scudler; Genevieve Jacobs; Stanley Norwood; Carroll Whaley; Milton Whaley; Herman Houghton; Letta Cary; Helen Haddock; Frances Spencer; Marion Ashcraft; Mabel Webber; Ella Jacobs; Alvina Haskin; Gladys Houghton; Cecylia Jacobs; Clay Houghton; George Miller; Florence Webber; Robert Jacobs; Violet Toland.

List of Delegates.
Among the delegates who are in attendance at the convention aside from the officers and the Janesville members, are: Mrs. Martha M. Boyd, Lima Center; Mrs. W. E. Palmer, Edgerton; Mrs. B. J. Jeffrey, Milton; Miss Hannah M. Voorhees, Clinton; Mrs. Eliza Tall, Edgerton; Mrs. J. C. Cullen, Edgerton; Mrs. V. H. Campbell, Evansville; Mrs. Mattie Wilcox, Harmony; Mrs. Mattie Miller, Harmony; Mattie E. West, Milton Junction; Mrs. Carrie E. Anderson, Milton; Mrs. Mary M. Barrett, Beloit; Miss Ella Knapp, Wellington, O.; Miss Edna Trueman, Lima; Mrs. Clara Royce, Beloit; Mrs. H. B. Osborn, Milton; and Mrs. C. E. Patterson, Beloit.

At the dinner given in the parlors of the Methodist church today, following the election of officers for the W. C. T. U. for the ensuing year, plates were laid for fifty guests, including the thirty-four delegates from different parts of the county.

The honorary guests were Rev. and Mrs. Williams and Mr. Reynolds, presiding elder of the Methodist conference, of Janesville; Rev. O. S. Mills of Milton Junction; and Prof. West of this city.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST ITALIAN BOY DROPPED

Case Adjourned Two Weeks by Which Time Boy and Gang He is Working With Will Be Out of Town.

It developed today that the value of the potatoes which John Panzani, the fourteen-year-old Italian boy, who is accused by Stephen S. Burham of stealing from his potato patch, were valued at about fifteen cents, instead of one dollar, as was stated in the complaint. The case was adjourned two weeks and as the section gang, which has been working near the sugar factory, and with whom the boy worked, will be gone before that time, proceedings in the case will probably be dropped. The arrest was made principally to stop the alleged depredations on Mr. Burham's property. He alleges that they not only stole potatoes, but stole chickens also.

The Food Behind the Men Behind the Gun

When the American Battleship Fleet visited the Thames last November, the London Daily Mirror sent a representative aboard the flagship with instructions to find out the cause of the superior physical condition of the American Jack-tar over the average British Blue-jacket.

An officer of the American flagship, upon being questioned regarding the food of the American Navy, said: "They have the best food of any navy on earth, and when they ask for more—like Oliver Twist—they have it without question."

Then the chief commissariat steward handed the newspaper man a sample breakfast bill of fare: It read:

Soft boiled eggs (two)
Post Toasties with milk
Bread, butter and coffee.

Post Toasties

are a delicious, nourishing food made of white Indian corn.

Crisp and tempting, this food is the wholesome favorite for breakfast with hundreds of thousands at home and abroad.

Markers for Streets Which Arrived Some Time Ago Are Being Placed.
—Street Improvements.

Janesville streets will soon be graced by respectable and easily readable street signs following installation for this needed improvement, originating shortly after the erection of the old standards bearing the names of the streets, and which lasted so poorly. A force of men began the erection of the signs this morning under the direction of Street Commissioner D. Wilkins. It is expected that the entire city will be covered by the men within a week or ten days and after that it will be impossible for a stranger to lose his way for want of knowing what street he is travelling.

Are Oiling Streets.
The street department is further engaged in street improvements. A force of men began today the laying of brick gutters on the Corn Exchange which is a much needed improvement. The work of oiling Washington street from West Third to Ravine and further on to Mineral Point avenue was completed yesterday. This year the property owners are paying for the improvement and have decided on the use of oil in the place of the water gas tar which was used last year. It is stated that the oil is much superior in many ways. The block on North High street between Madison and Ravine street is also being treated with oil, and work in other parts of the city will be started shortly.

"That the American People liked to be humbugged"

Well, Barnum only stopped one day in a town. Even so, he later admitted that to make a success you must do as you advertise,

Hundreds of women know fully as much about style and quality as the merchant. To advertise a high grade article at an extremely low price and then substitute an inferior article does not deceive the average buyer.

HERE'S PROOF POSITIVE OF WHAT CHIROPRACTIC CAN ACCOMPLISH

This woman was saved from an operation. Chiropractic went right straight to the cause of her trouble, removed the cause of the disease and forestalled an operation that her medical adviser was sure was necessary.

READ THE TESTIMONIAL:

Milton Jett, Wis., June 30, 1911.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: After suffering with kidney and bladder trouble for seven weeks and attended by a medical man a greater part of that time and getting no relief, an operation was advised.

Having heard of the wonderful results of the Janesville Chiropractors, Puddicombe & Puddicombe, were having, I resolved to give them a trial. On the 24th day of June, 1911, at 10 P. M., the Chiropractors arrived at our farm. After the first adjustment the severe pain in my abdomen and back left me; up to this time I've taken four adjustments and am pleased to say I feel like a new woman. (Signed).

MRS. L. B. DRUMM.

A very interesting feature of this case is the fact that the lady was able to call personally at our office for an adjustment the following Saturday.

DEATH OF PIONEER AT CLINTON FRIDAY

David Adams, Old and Highly Respected Resident of Clinton, Had Many Pioneer Experiences.

Clinton, Sept. 12.—Friday morning, September 8, marked the close of the long life pilgrimage of David Adams, who passed away at his home on North Main street, Clinton, Wiscon., after a stroke of apoplexy from which he had suffered three weeks previous.

He leaves to mourn his departure, besides his widow, seven sons and one daughter—Wills, George and Elmer of Manchester, Ill.; Ira C. of Holt; Clarence, of Rockford, Ill.; Meritt, of Thumner, No. Dak.; and Glen, of Chicago; Mrs. Elizabeth Young, of Rescoe, Ill., and sixteen grand children and twenty great-grandchildren.

All of these were present at the bedside of their father with the exception of Meritt Adams to whom it was impossible to get a message of his father's death.

The funeral was held at the home on Sunday at one o'clock. Rev. W. P. Leach, of Racine, officiated, assisted by Rev. J. A. Collins, of Clinton. The services were in charge of the Masonic lodge, of which Mr. Adams had been a member for over fifty years. Interment took place at the family lot in Oak Hill Cemetery, in Manchester, Ill. The deceased's six sons acted as pall bearers.

David Adams was born June 22, 1817, in the Township of Enfield, Tompkins county, near Ithaca, N. Y. He grew up in a little log cabin in the hills and attended school a total of three winter terms. The three books which he studied were the English Reader, the New Testament and Aesop's Fables.

At fifteen years of age he began driving on the tow path along the canal. As driver, he was obliged to walk from two or three o'clock in the morning until late at night.

At the age of sixteen years, he was promoted to be steersman of a boat. It took from three to five weeks to make the round trip from Cayuga Lake to Albany, depending upon the number of boats in the lock and the number of tugs. In the winter time he worked as lumberman in the woods.

On February 1, 1838, Mr. Adams was united in marriage to Miss Mary Mages and in the same year, as he became twenty-one years of age, he was promoted to captaincy of a canal boat. He made many trips on the Erie Canal and thence down the Hudson river to New York City and return.

During his trips Mr. Adams saw a great deal of New York in its early days. There were no street cars of any kind in the city then. All passenger traffic was by means of bus-ness.

There were no bridges connecting New York with Brooklyn. In those days liquor was sold from stores just the same as groceries, and nearly everyone, including clergymen, were accustomed to use liquor. Wherever a customer traded largely, the merchant always treated, but at the same time there was considerable temperance agitation by a society called the Thompsonians.

In 1841 an older brother returned to New York state from the West and told of the wonderful possibilities of the country from which he had just come. Mr. Adams decided to try the new country and started west with his brother in the same year. Arriving at Southport (Kenosha) by boat, they rode on a bus through to Clinton Corners, stopping at the various taverns enroute. From Clinton Corners they walked south to the land which Mr. Adams' brother owned in Boone county, Ill.

Mr. Adams returned East to get his family and to close his business there and in 1846, he and his family and two other families started west in a "prairie schooner," carrying all their possessions and three children, aged seven, four and two years old. Arriving West he traded his team and some money for eighty acres of land at four dollars an acre, and this same farm is now worth one hundred dollars an acre. The family lived in a little log cabin, 15 by 15 feet in size, which can still be seen down by the old Nash place at the side of the road.

For a number of years Mr. Adams engaged in rearing between Racine and Southport, Racine and Milwaukee. He also did some threshing with a flail and later owned a threshing machine run by horse power. It cost twenty cents a bushel to haul wheat to the Lake and there it sold for only thirty, two cents a bushel; called cloth cost twenty-five cents a yard; sugar ten cents a pound; green coffee fourteen cents a pound and tea, seventy-five cents a pound. In 1855 Mr. Adams gave up farming, broke up his land and put in all of his time farming. For a number of winters, however, he went to Michigan and because of his experience in lumber in the East, took charge of operations for a lumbering company.

By the year 1875 Mr. Adams owned a number of adjoining farms in Manchester, Ill., aggregating over five hundred acres. More than half of this land he gave to his children.

In 1881, his wife, Mary M. Adams, died, and in 1882 he married Nancy M. Mages. In 1883 he moved to Clinton, residing here until his death.

In 1896 he joined the Methodist Episcopal church and served as trustee for some years.

PHYSICALLY PERFECT. C. H. A. McKim, the "physically perfect man." Especially posed for The Gazette and a diagram showing his measurements as compared with the perfect normal man.

Berkeley, Cal.—Absolute physical perfection is the remarkable attribute of C. H. A. McKim, 20 years old, a freshman student at the University of California, registered from Pomona, Cal. Stripped, the youth has the beauty of a classical statue, his muscles being smooth and rippling, and his body being proportioned on the lines laid down by experts after long research for the guidance of physical instruction.

In his street clothes McKim appears to be but a normal college student, with neither the height of many athletes nor the clumsy bulk of former college gladiators. But in the opinion of Prof. W. E. Magoon of the university he is "the perfect man" in physique.

McKim is neither notably tall nor stocky. He is but 5 feet 8 inches in height and his weight is 148 pounds. There are many men in the present baby class at the university who are taller and heavier and have wider reach of arms.

The young man leads the whole class in the strength test which he and others had to pass for football training.

McKim is the son of J. H. McKim, a wealthy retired farmer living at Pomona.

Assemblage of the Season's Modes

We have searched the fashion centers pretty carefully during the last few months and have made a critical study of the style tendencies for this fall and winter. We have selected garments that are noted the world over for their perfection in style, fit and durability. The designers of these garments are men of genius who are well known wherever good clothes are sold. As a result we announce our fall exhibition of all that is new and in vogue for fall and winter, 1911-12 for discriminating, well dressed women.

MATTER OF FUNDS PROMISED TRAINING SCHOOL DISCUSSED

Board of Directors of Commercial and Industrial Club Consider Problem Over Which There is Misunderstanding.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Commercial and Industrial Club held in the office of A. P. Lovejoy last evening, a communication was received from Supt. O. D. Antfield and the authorities of the Rock County Training school asking concerning the payment of $1,000 which was promised by the city of Janesville to the institution in addition to the rooms in the Jefferson building, should the school be located here.

The matter as presented to the industrial and commercial board last night resolved itself into a number of questions. When the offer was made by the city to the county board, the latter body was led to believe that the $1,000 promised would be forthcoming at any time or at least by the time alterations on the quarters in the Jefferson building were completed. However, this would be impossible on the part of the city of Janesville, as the appropriations for the present year were made last October and no provision was made for such an expenditure as the training school presented.

Consequently it has developed that the funds cannot be paid until after the 1st of January next, and it will also be necessary to secure the payment at that time to have the council at the first meeting in October appropriate $1,000 for the purpose named.

As much as the training school has need of the funds at the present time, however, to pay for the improvements on the rooms, it was desired that some provision be made at once. The action taken by the board of directors of the industrial and commercial club was that they request the Janesville board of education to have the city council include in their budget, the training school item. It was also voted to have the Rock County board borrow the $1,000 at once and pay it to the training school authorities, and the club would pay the interest on the same until January.

Matters relative to new factories under consideration by the club were discussed last evening, and Carl Buchholz and Andrew Gibbons were to the industrial committee.

Arraigned Yesterday Charged with Attempt to Rob Frank Fischer, Near Afton, Monday Afternoon.

Hugh Stockman, a farmer living east of the city, has established his headquarters temporarily at least, and incidentally, at the county jail. Stockman was arraigned yesterday morning in municipal court for attempted robbery from the person of Frank Fischer, who lives in the town of Janesville, near Afton, Monday afternoon. Mr. Fischer had gone to the golf club at Afton Monday and was returning home in the afternoon when he met Stockman who asked him for a ride. Stockman it is alleged was under the influence of liquor and after being given a seat on the wagon attempted to drive the rig. He was kept from doing this and prevented from hitting the horses with the whip, which, it is claimed, he attempted to do. Angered at this, it is alleged, Stockman tried to rob Fischer. A tussle ensued, it is said, and the two fell out of the wagon to the ground. Mr. Fischer got the advantage of Stockman, who is a small man, and placed him to the ground calling for help. C. J. Kilmer and his son, in front of whose place the struggle is alleged to have occurred, came out and the belligerent Hugh was subdued. Mr. Fischer brought Stockman to Janesville and turned him over to the sheriff.

Just previous to his arrest Monday Stockman had been released Monday morning after serving a ten day sentence for drunkenness. For the past few weeks the man has been on parole, securing his release from a five day sentence by giving security for the fine. He was released for the first time and a few hours later was taken into custody and received the ten day sentence.

Frank Case.

Paul Frank, twenty-two years of age, living in the town of Johnston, was brought into court yesterday charged with poisoning and discharging a gun at John G. Thiede of Johnston, on Sept. 9. Frank pleaded not guilty and his trial was set for next Monday. Frank claimed that he and nine other young men had been shooting gophers and had a gallon of cider with them. Thiede became angered, he said, when a drink of the cider was refused him.

Quality and Quantity Circulation:

AFTER a period of sixty-eight years, representing a gradual steady, healthy growth, The Janesville Daily Gazette has resolved itself into the one most profitable advertising medium in Southern Wisconsin.

ITS claim to pre-eminence in this section as the best advertising medium is based solely upon its immense circulation and above all on the stability of that circulation. Constantly increasing, never decreasing, the tide of its "staple reaching power" stands for a live, up-to-the-minute newspaper which has become a part of the daily lives of people to whom it goes.

ITS circulation figure represents a list of the same people every day in the year; the purchasing class that is so essential for the advertiser to reach.

IN Janesville there are approximately 3,300 homes. Out of this possible total the Gazette is carried daily into over 2,500. On the rural routes out of Janesville and in the smaller towns surrounding there are sent every night 3,100 Gazette's. Circulation men figure that each paper is read by at least five persons. This being so, it brings The Gazette before over 35,000 people daily.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

THE correctness with which a man pronounces, an old college professor used to tell all his classes, "is the hall mark of his culture and education."

How do you think you would stand according to that criterion? It seems to me that very few people would be up to the mark by that test.

Perhaps you think my remarks are unduly sweeping and uninteresting. Perhaps you think that you, for instance, do not very often make a mistake in pronunciation.

Now before you put yourself on the back, my friend, let me ask you how you pronounce a few words like address, inquiry, alias, interesting, aspirant, grievous, harness, illustrate, precedence, resource.

Look up your pronunciation of these words in the dictionary and if you have them all right I humbly beg your pardon. But I'll wager I won't have to.

Of course, the common words which could hardly be pronounced in more than one way most of us get right. Only children and distinctly ignorant people make errors in these. But there are many words which are commonly pronounced two or three ways and yet which should properly be pronounced only one way. When a man pronounces all these words properly he has certainly earned his window in the Hall of Culture.

But how few people do. Of course, it would be almost impossible to sit down and correct these words all at once and learn to pronounce them aright.

But one can make an effort to notice different pronunciations in the course of conversation and then hunt out the right one and make it one's own.

That's the hardest way, but, like most hardest ways, it's the only sure one. It isn't safe to adopt a pronunciation because you hear someone you think is well educated using it. Many people who ought to know better cling firmly to faulty pronunciations.

Nor is it safe to adopt a pronunciation because it sounds "high-brow." You are very apt to get caught this way. For instance, I think "inquiry" sounds most "college-professorly," but as a matter of fact "inquiry" has the weight of authority. And again, "precedence" certainly sounds pretentious, but "precedence" really is the right pronunciation.

If you care to hunt down some of these words I think you will find the chase rather interesting.

Of course there's the drawback that even if you do learn to pronounce correctly ninety-nine hundredths of the people who hear you won't know you are doing so.

But cheer up. Think how the other one hundredth will appreciate such a rarity.

Besides, you know, knowledge as well as virtue, is, or surely ought to be, its own reward.

The KITCHEN CABINET

FINISH but a fool, that makes no sense. The outward habit by the inward man. —Shakespeare.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

When your family are tired of the same things, try a few changes like the following. Such dishes, though nothing expensive or new vary the diet and make a pleasant change in the food.

Potato Surprises.—Take three cups of mashed potato, six tablespoons of breadcrumbs, a tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper to taste, one egg, and three cooked sausages. Mix all together, except crumbs and sausage, and form into balls, putting a small piece of sausage in each one. Dip in egg, roll in the crumbs and fry in hot fat.

Cottage Pie.—Put a layer of mashed and seasoned potatoes in a buttered baking dish, add a little gravy, pepper and salt and a few drops of onion juice, and a little chopped meat; repeat and finish with potato on top. Dot with bits of butter and bake.

Poached Eggs, Portuguese Style.—Cut six even-sized tomatoes in halves crosswise, take out the pulp and fill them with the following stuffing: Fry four small onions or shallots in one tablespoonful of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, one tablespoonful of chopped sweet. Season with salt, pepper, paprika and grated nutmeg; then add the pulp of an egg and mix all together. Place in the oven to brown, and serve on a round of buttered toast with a poached egg on top, neatly trimmed. Garnish with parsley and serve hot.

Bread Pudding.—Take a cup and a half of milk, one-half cup of sugar, two slices of bread, lightly buttered, and one egg. Beat the egg and sugar together thoroughly, add the milk slowly, beating all the time. Place the bread in a baking dish and turn the custard over it. The bread will rise to the top of the dish like a crust. Allow it to stand one hour, and then bake fifteen minutes in a very hot oven. Serve immediately with cream, sugar and a little flavoring added. This pudding is nicely made and baked is as delicate as a soufflé.

To Clarify Rainwater.

To clarify the cloudy rainwater and render it fit for washing, and household purposes, measure two ounces of powdered alum and two ounces of borax, for each barrel, and add it to the water. In a few hours the sediment will settle, and the water will be clarified and fit for use.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

THE LAST SURVIVING SIGNER OF THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

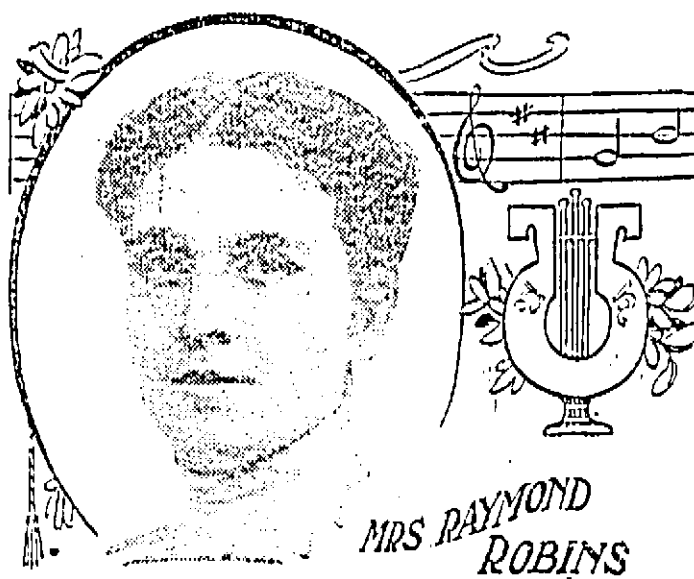

By A. W. MACY.

When Charles Carroll of Carrollton affixed his signature to the Declaration of Independence another signer standing by remarked, "There go a few millions." Carroll was a rich man, and few if any of the other signers risked as much by the Revolution in the way of property as he did. But the Revolution succeeded and he did not lose his wealth. When an old man he assisted in the ceremony of laying the first rail of the first railroad in the United States, the Baltimore & Ohio. In 1831 Captain Alexander, of the British army, made a tour of the United States, and visited Charles Carroll, not then "of Carrollton," but of Baltimore. In a journal describing his travels he made this record:

"At Baltimore, I visited Charles Carroll, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. I found the venerable patriarch quite alone, and seemingly musing. . . . The old gentleman, dressed in a dark purple gown, and seated in a high-backed chair, was rather short of stature, and stooped under the burden of years. His nose was aquiline, and his expression was particularly mild and engaging. The speech, slight and hearing of the veteran had not much failed him, but his memory had."

Carroll was then in his ninety-fourth year. He died November 14, 1832, the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence.

MRS. RAYMOND ROBINS

OPERA FOR WORKERS.

Chicago, Ill.—Grand opera is the newest attraction which Mrs. Raymond Robins, president of the Women's Trade Union League is to provide for working girls.

The season will open next Sunday afternoon at 331 South La Salle street, with "Parafid." Arnold Dresden, a professor at the University of Wisconsin, who conducted the musical evenings given by the league last winter in the small parks, will have charge of the program.

At each of the regular monthly meetings of the Women's Trade Union League during the coming winter, Mrs. Robins plans to give the girls selections from the best operas.

"We mean to combine business and the social side of life," said Mrs. Robins.

Many of our girls are hungry for good music and all of them cannot afford to go to the opera. We gave them concerts in the small parks last winter.

"It will be enjoyed by those who cannot go to the opera and by those who can as well, for Mr. Dresden will interpret the music and explain to them the meaning of it. Those who can attend a performance at the Auditorium will appreciate it more after they have listened to Mr. Dresden's interpretation of the great masterpieces. I look for a large attendance when our opera season opens next Sunday afternoon."

Mrs. Robins said many noted musicians have volunteered their services. The meetings will be free and open to all working girls.

FADS AND FASHIONS.

New York, September 12.—The display of autumn and winter fashions in the big shops is extremely attractive this year owing to the wonderful variety and beauty of materials, colors, trimmings and accessories shown. It is too early in the season to make any positive prediction concerning the changes in styles which the coming season may bring. The time for the fall openings in Paris has not yet arrived and the models sent out in advance are little more than tentative attempts to foreshadow the coming modes. For this reason conservative buyers will do well to use great caution in making their selections at this time.

Stripes are almost everywhere to be found among the tailored costumes included in this advance showing, but the faded striped materials has been used all through the summer and there is every reason to believe that its general popularity will cause it to be abandoned to a great extent by the most fashionable dressers. However, there are attractive striped effects in all the modish woolsens, broadcloths, serges, zibelines, etc., and there are lovely striped velvets and silks and chiffons, but many of these seem likely to be used as trimmings rather than as frock material.

The displays include some extremely pretty three-piece and two-piece tailored models in fine stripes, black or dark blue with line zones of white or color being especially emphasized. A black broadcloth striped in half lines of royal blue and made up with touches of royal blue bengaline in the trimming scheme was one of the best looking three-piece suits seen among the advance models, and one of the Fifth avenue houses is showing an extremely chic two-piece imported model in rich yet not too vivid dark purple striped narrowly with black and trimmed in black panne velvet and black braid.

There are good grays too among the striped suits, two-tone stripes or gray striped in black. Black striped with half lines of white also seems to be popular.

The coat frock or one-piece frock, whose lines suggest a coat and skirt, was worn last spring and is seen in some practical and pretty models for autumn service. Many women object to the one-piece frock for street wear, insisting that they do not feel themselves correctly dressed for street appearance without a coat, but this coat frock is at its best in attractive compromise. The fine clothes with almost invisible stripes are successfully used for these costumes and one of the smartest early autumn street models seen was built up in black cloth with fine blue stripes, with black satin for waistcoat, under-sleeves, glasse and underskirt. A elegant-like fold of blue silk fell from neck to girdle just at the left of the waistcoat opening and headed a side-fall of plaited net and lace.

Child effects are very popular and handsome suits showing one-half or two-thirds of the width in black and the rest in bold plaid of skillfully blended coloring afford opportunity for beautiful use of the plaid, while the border is also wide enough to be handled as bodice, sleeve or under-skirt material.

The blouses of the summer have been remarkably pretty and some of them now marked down to much less than their original prices are well worth buying. To be sure their lines and detail may be out of fashion next summer, but they may be used during the autumn and even the coming winter. All white is perhaps most practical, but the colored embroideries have caught Parisian fancy in respect to both blouses and its lingerie frocks, and the designers have evolved some charming models touched with color, dull blue or dark blue, rose, leather brown, etc.

Of course there are innumerable blouses loaded with coarse machine embroidery in color, but the most elegant chance can distinguish between these and the dainty hand-embroidered blouse, the design of whose embroidery is often of the simplest character, though the daintiness of the work makes it wonderfully effective.

It was said last spring that Parisian designers were making an effort to get away from the velveteen costume blouse which has had so long a period of popularity, and an unusual number of silk blouses appeared to substantiate the statement, but the fact remains that the blouse of chiffon or net matching the suit in color and made over a contrasting foundation is the

TALK TO HOUSE-KEEPERS

(By Mrs. Nellie L. Horn.)
"Autumn stands amid her sheaves. Brooding by the lonely shore, While the wind of twilight grieves. Rustle are the rustling leaves On the pathways of yore; Autumn stands amid her sheaves."

Potatoes.
There is perhaps no vegetable that lends itself to a greater variety of ways of serving than the common potato. But too many housewives are contented with serving them in the "same old way" while there are as many methods of preparation deserving of attention.

French Fried Potatoes.
This appetizing way of serving potatoes is often taboed by the busy housekeeper because of the labor entailed in serving time when there are so many other things to attend to. However, they may be prepared quite easily in this way: After cutting the potatoes into any desired shape, let them boil, a few at a time, in a pan of moderately heated fat; when the edges begin to brown slightly, drain, and let stand on a soft piece of brown paper until cold. When time to serve, put them into a frying basket and plunge them into smoking hot fat, dipping them up and down once or twice until they are golden and browned. Drain, sprinkle with salt and serve at once.

Creamed Potatoes With Green Peppers.
Pare and dice enough raw potatoes to make a generous quart. Remove the seeds from two green peppers, and cut them into rings. Put the diced potatoes and sliced peppers into a sauce pan with sufficient water and let them boil for about twenty minutes. Then drain, sprinkle with flour and salt and pepper, and turn into a baking dish. Cover with milk or cream, dot with butter, and bake in a hot oven until nicely browned. Serve at once.

Fricassee of Potato.
There is no better way of preparing potatoes than in a fricassee and it is far easier to fix than one would imagine. Have ready enough raw potatoes pared and diced to make a pint. Put a tablespoon of butter and two table-spoons of flour into a sauce pan, and stir over the fire until the flour is brown. Then add the well drained potato cubes and stir well. Cover the pan and cook the potatoes for ten minutes, stirring frequently. Then add salt and pepper to taste and a pint of boiling water. Simmer for fifteen minutes longer, stirring often to prevent burning.

Chantilly Potatoes.
Mash boiled potatoes, season to taste, and beat until light and creamy. Heap into a baking dish. Beat half a cup of cream until stiff and add one-half cup of soft grated cheese and season with salt and pepper. Spread this over the potato, and set

OIL AND BUTTERMILK.

Several tablets are now made for making buttermilk, all of which are good. Any druggist can furnish them. There is no objection to taking oil with buttermilk, as there is to taking it with starch food or meat, since the albumen of buttermilk is easily digested, principally in the intestine; and there is an advantage in taking oil with a meal consisting entirely of sugar fruits, since the oil retards the secretion of gastric fluid, which is not needed for the passage of the food to the intestine, where it is digested.

In hot oven until nicely browned. This is delicious and makes a dainty "company dish."

VERIFY IT.

The Proof is in Janesville Almost at Your Door.

The public statement of a Janesville citizen is in itself strong proof for Janesville people, but confirmation strengthens the evidence.

Here is a Janesville citizen who testified years ago that Doan's Kidney Pills relieved sick kidneys and now states the cure was permanent. Can any sufferer from kidney ills ask better proof? You can investigate. The case is right at home.

Mrs. Joseph Cowar, 302 Eastern Ave., Janesville, Wis., says: "The bottle I received from Doan's Kidney Pills when I used them some years ago has been permanent. I willingly confirm my former endorsement of this remedy. I was afflicted with kidney complaint for several weeks and was feeling miserable in every way when a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I got a supply at The People's Drug Company and the contents of three boxes sufficed to rid me of my trouble. I never fail to advise a trial of Doan's Kidney Pills whenever I hear anyone complaining of weak kidneys."

Thought for Today
By MRS. ROBERT M. LAFFLETTE.
NERVE DISSIPATION.

PROF. WILLIAM JAMES in one of his books says an accomplished Hindu visitor at Cambridge concluded to him that the sight of our faces all contracted as they are with the habitual over-intensity and anxiety of expression made on him a very painful impression, and he did not see how it was possible for us to live as we do, without a single minute in our day given to tranquility and meditation.

Women are particularly the victims of "over-intensity and anxiety of expression." Largely the result of wasted effort and needless worry. Take a new gown, for example; the time we spend selecting the material, color and style is not wasted. But all through the process we fret and wonder if some other material, some other color, some other way would not have been better. So with a reception or church festival; after all the plans are made, and everything done that can be, we have nervous panics lest something will go wrong or be forgotten, and we go over the work in our mind a hundred times, which is as foolish as cleaning house, and then cleaning it right over again lest we have missed a fly speck.

The idea of self help in using and saving the nervous energy is the first step in overcoming this habit of nerve dissipation. We should watch our state of mind, and call ourselves to account sharply, asking "Is this important? Am I economizing or wasting effort?" The nervous energy is the most precious of the vital forces. We should use it as saving all the time we can for meditation. As we gain control the strained look will leave our faces and they will take on an expression of repose. It is a better recipe than any massage cream to preserve beauty of face, say nothing of its influence on our peace of mind and spiritual tranquility.

HEART AND HOME TALKS
BY BARBARA BOYD

The Business Girl's Truest Economy.

HOW to be wisely economical is a problem that often puzzles the earnest business girl. She earns rather a small salary, and she wants to save. How shall she manage so that she can save.

She is perfectly right in wanting to save; and every business girl should save something each week, even if it can be a no larger amount than ten cents. To many girls, this sum seems so trifling that if they cannot put by more, they will not save any. But if they will begin with ten cents, they will soon find it increasing to fifteen, and more. In this case, it is not the amount that counts, but the habit.

But this is another story. How can the girl who wants to save, economize so she can save, on a small salary? Many a girl does it by making her own clothes at night, or trimming her hats, or working in some such way. Also, many a business girl who wants prettier clothes than she can afford to buy gets them by sewing at night. But both these girls are unwise. The girl who wants to economize should begin first by saving herself. The business girl's truest economy is economy of her earning powers.

The business girl's real success lies in her work. To do this well, she needs to come to it fresh every morning, unweary, and with an appetite for it. All her faculties need to be on the alert. She needs to keep herself posted in her work, to advance as it advances. This means that she not only will enjoy her work, but that she will earn more and more in it as the years go by.

If now, she works at night, she will come to her business in the morning, fagged. She will be tired, sleepy. She will be liable to make mistakes. She will not have that air of alertness and vigor that employers like. And the few dollars she has saved by her night-work will be more than lost in the course of the year by her failure to advance in the business world.

Then, too, the girl who tries to economize by working at night often pays out for tonics, for days lost at the office, for doctor's and oculist's bills, far more than she has saved by her extra labor. It is usually poor economy in the long run. She will find that the most profitable economy is economy of her earning powers.

Many a girl is compelled to make her clothes at night, because her salary is so small there is no evading the necessity. But even this girl should remember that her truest economy is economy of herself, and should try to cut this home work down to its lowest limit. Her whole effort should be to pull ahead on the salary question, to earn more so that she can cut out the home work; and who should keep herself just as fresh and vigorous as possible for her business day. For this is where her money comes from.

Instead of trying to economize by making her clothes, a girl can cut down on their cost by judicious buying, by getting things that will wear well, by dressing simply. A little self-denial for a few years in this matter will enable her to get ahead, and then her salary will enable her to get the pretty things she craves. Whereas, by trying to economize, by burning the candle at both ends, she simply wears herself out, and at the end of a few years, not only is not any farther ahead in the business world, but she is not half so able physically to fight the battle for a living. The business girl who wants to save should begin first by saving herself. Eventually, it is the surest road to increase her bank account.

SPECIAL TRAIN ON THE NORTHWESTERN TO FAIR ON FRIDAY

Extra Train Has Been Arranged To Accommodate Crowds Friday—Leaves Janesville At 7:15.

As previously announced in the columns of the Gazette a special train will run through to Milwaukee Friday, September 15, over the Northwestern road, for the accommodation of those who wish to attend the big state fair now in progress at the Cream City.

Station Agent A. L. Housness recently received explicit instructions regarding this extra service and a schedule showing the time the train will leave the various points along the line from Beloit, its starting point to the end of the run. This train will leave Janesville at 7:15 in the morning and returning will leave Milwaukee at 7:20 in the evening.

Although it will be impossible for the lower city band to make the trip on this special train to the state fair as was expected there will be a great many others who have planned to see the fair who will take advantage of the good service given by the extra.

The charges for the round trip will be one and one-half fares with the return ticket set at September 18, thus giving the visitors a chance to see the fair in Milwaukee next Monday.

If they are desirous of avoiding the crowds that are expected to jam the train on its return trip to this city in the evening.

Following is the complete schedule showing the points at which the train will be stopped:

Le. Beloit 6:15
Janesville 7:15
Milwaukee Jct. 7:30
Koshkonong 7:40
Pt. Atkinson 7:55
Jefferson 8:11
Ar. West Allis 9:20
Milwaukee 9:50

Returning this train will leave Milwaukee at 7:20 p. m. and West Allis at 7:30.

NOTES FOR CITY FARMERS ONLY.

(By H. L. RANN.)

There is a lot of good old-fashioned sense in the theory that parents are to blame for the misdeeds of the trouble their children get into. The small towns and cities are top heavy with girls who are as free from restraint as a married man on an ocean liner.

The mother who will allow her daughter to make the night train, fill every predatory male who strays into the village with an all-day spree with some swinging stranger or whose sole recommendation are a two-piece summer suit and a pair of colobow hose is a bigger fool than Thompson's cat. When people begin to talk about the girl, the mother cries and says she can't understand it. There won't be elbow room at the judgment day for women who turn their daughters loose as soon as the dishes are washed and who have no more idea where they are or what they are up to than if they were so many humming birds.

Talking about clumps of the parental persimmon, what do you think of the father who wants his boy to be a sport, go the rounds get wind up, etc., before the youngster is out of his teens, in order that he may "cut his teeth" on this tooth-cutting proposition. If we had to take our choice between a studious abey who could show a shred of character on leaving college and the un-fledged bull-necked sport whose chief aim in life is to make a new smash and get away with sixty cigarettes a day, we would place our money on the abey.

LITERARY SOCIETIES BEGIN ACTIVE WORK

Rusk Lyceum Held Meeting Monday and Organized for Year—Forum Will Hold First Meeting Next Monday.

The members of the Rusk Lyceum literary society of the high school held their first meeting Monday afternoon at which very little was done.

The officers were elected with new men as follows: Robert Cunningham, president; Ralph Souham, vice president; Louis French, secretary; Willis Sutherland, treasurer; Cecelia Bailey, chairman of the program committee; and Victor Hennings, sergeant-at-arms. The society voted to admit Harold Laughlin, John Grant, and Stewart Mills to membership, following their initiation next Monday night.

In the evening the entire company gathered at Macdonald's cafe where the newly elected officers stood treat for the rest of the members.

Mr. Arbuthnot has been elected to the position of critic for the Rusk in place of Mr. Rahr, who has been in that office for the last two years.

At present the society has a membership of twenty-two and only three more can be admitted to membership as twenty-five is the limit.

The Forum literary society will hold its first meeting next Monday evening at which seven new members will be initiated, which will make the total membership twenty-five. Mr. McMurray has already been chosen as the critic for this year and will be quite an aid to the society. The members are looking forward with a great deal of anticipation to the treat which the new officers, to be elected at the first meeting, will probably invite them.

RUSH AND BUSTLE CONSTANT STRAIN

American Life One to Strain Both Mind and Body.

The rush and bustle of American life is a constant strain on both mind and body. Gradually the human machine wears out under the unnatural strain and nervous debility results.

Statistics show that half the people of the United States are in a run-down nervous condition.

A man or woman in this condition can get little happiness or success out of life. They feel tired all the time, have no energy or ambition and are gloomy, timid and despondent. They do not sleep well or eat well or feel well and life instead of being a pleasure seems more like a burden.

Are you one of these half sick, listless, nervous people? If you are you know that there is a tonic now being sold that has brought back the old energy and pleasure in life to thousands who have tried it. The name of the tonic is Tona Vita. It is being introduced in this country by a number of physicians. It has been pronounced the greatest medicine ever before sold to the public. In each city there is an agent for Tona Vita who will refund the purchase price if the tonic fails to give you complete and entire satisfaction. Let Tona Vita build you up and bring back your strength and vitality. You will be astonished how quickly it acts. The very first dose will convince you what a great medicine it is.

Lee's Rhubarb Laxative is used as an assistant to Tona Vita in cases of chronic constipation. It is a family medicine pleasant to the taste, containing the splendid laxative qualities of rhubarb. Ask your physician about rhubarb and see if he does not tell you it is the best possible laxative for children.

The Smith Pharmacy have the agency for these two great medicines in Janesville.

Essence of Fine Breeding.

In families well ordered there is always one firm and sweet temper, which controls without seeming to dictate. The essence of all fine breeding is in the gift of oscillation. A man who possesses every other title to our respect besides that of courtesy, is in danger of forfeiting them all. A rude manner renders its owner always liable to affront. It is never without dignity who avoids wounding the dignity of others.

NO MAN'S LAND A ROMANCE

He looked away from her, avoiding her eyes, while the struggle for mastery of self went on within him. To make time, "You—you don't find it lonely?" he asked.

She shook her head.

"And yet—cut off from the world—I should think—"

"I have sufficient to occupy me," she interrupted. "And we're not wholly out of touch. A boat brings us provisions and whatever else we may require from New Bedford every week."

"You see the papers, then?" he asked with a trace of eagerness.

"No; they are prohibited—doctor's orders."

"And no one writes you?"

"Nobody knows where we are."

"An admirable arrangement; I congratulate Mr. Blackstock," Coast commented—contemptibly, he felt.

She gave him a look of slow, withering scorn. "Do you think he fears you?"

"No; O!" He laughed shortly.

"Probably not."

"Why should he? We both know you too well to believe you would repeat your mistake, in cold blood, for sheer revenge."

"My mistake?" he parroted blankly.

"Oh, to be sure . . . No; hardly that." He waited a moment, noting how strained and tense she was.

"Nevertheless," he added quietly, "I should like to see him for a moment."

"Is it necessary?"

"I should like to see him," he repeated.

"No—let's here just now." She met his keen, questioning look with a proud lift of her head. "On the island," she continued, "but not here. I'll be back before long."

"Thank you," he replied evenly; "I'll wait."

"But Garrett!" She seemed to overcome an inward resistance and, re-entering the doorway, stood near him, touching his arm with a gentle, persuasive hand, her eyes imploring.

"Must you?" He nodded gravely.

"But why—why make up this trivial grievance?" she protested. "Is it wise, right? . . . It's true, he testified against you. But what else could he do? You had your chance—he gave you your chance to escape, before the police came. After that, he had no choice. You shouldn't hold that against him, Garrett; if only you knew how he hated to take the stand against you, how terribly he felt it when you were convicted practically on his evidence . . . But now that it's all over and past remedy, wouldn't it be better not to reopen that old wound? Kindly, Garrett, and more generous . . . to me? You are free, can go where you will . . ."

She broke off with an anxious thought: "The detectives don't know where to look for you?"

"What? No." He laughed aloud, but mirthlessly. "Oh, no, I gave them the slip some time ago."

"I'm glad. But no, please, Garrett, won't you give this up. . . ."

She said more, much more, continuing to plead with him in a fever of distress, able only to comprehend one thing, that she must somehow avert the encounter he desired. But her rapid, stumbling accents were all meaningless in his understanding, which seemed to reel, dazed, by this revelation of the incredible. She had said enough to bring him face to face with the hideous, infamous fact that she still held him blood-guilty, still honored and believed Blackstock. He struggled to shake his wife together and think coherently, but to little purpose. All the world was mad and topsy-turvy—a mad, mad world, wherein all truth was false, faith was treachery, justice perverted, honor deep dishonor. For a little he felt that his reason hung in the balance, teetering between wild laughter and still wilder tears. It man can be hysterical, Coast was near to it.

And Katherine, witness to his excitement as evidenced in the working of his features, his shifting gaze, his hands so tightly clenched that the nails (who thought) must be biting deep into his palms, saw presently that he no longer listened to her.

She ceased to speak and waited, hoping against hope for what she deemed the best.

He was (so ran her thoughts, distracted, like wild things in a panic) not reasonably to be held in strict account for his attitude toward her or for his actions. In such men as he there must inevitably be something lacking, something like an abiding consciousness of right and wrong, the ability to distinguish between them; that ruler of the soul. In simple charity she must accord him patience.

If her eyes told her he was more a man than the Garrett Coast of old (and she saw him now in the fullest flush of health and vigor, sun-browned, weather-sensitized, glowing with strength and vitality) her mental vision clothed him with an aura of abnormality like a shroud, awful and repellent. He figured in her sight a murderer, a man who could strike to death an unarmed and defenceless friend, for a trifle. Nothing might ever avail to erase that fact from her consciousness.

Unconsciously she drew a pace or two away. The action roused him. He lifted to hers haggard eyes set in a haggard face; and their look was one of discernment. She knew instinctively that he divined her thought, that he knew why she had drawn away from him. And so pitiful he seemed that before she knew it her mood melted and knew only compassion for him.

"Oh, Garrett," she cried impulsively, "I am so sorry!"

Visibly he took command of himself. "I'm sure of that," he said slowly; "and I don't want to distress you. My coming here was pure accident, as I've said; and presently I'll go and . . . Blackstock need never know I've set foot on the island—since you wish it."

"Oh," he cried, half sobbing, "Thank you—thank you!"

"But first I want you to tell me one thing."

"Yes—anything!" she promised gratefully, heedless of his sober scrutiny.

"Are you happy?" he demanded forthwith; and held his breath, for on her answer everything he prized depended. "Are you happy with him—Blackstock?"

It was like cold water in her face. She gasped and drew herself up, straight and slim, defiant. "What right have you to ask me that?"

"None but that of a man who loved you once, and who, though he may not, loves you still—whatever you may think him, Katherine."

She held her answer, quivering with indignation. That he should dare—! Yet there were two things in his attitude to calm her: an imperious note, puzzling, and a simple dignity that left little foothold for resentment.

As for Coast, momentarily while she did not reply, the issue hung in the balance, whether he should speak or not; whether enlighten her forthwith or leave her (were she happy in her marriage) in her fool's Paradise. He felt himself a prey to discordant impulses, pride and generosity counselling him, each with a double tongue.

"I hold your happiness above all else," he resumed as the pause lengthened—"far above my own, Katherine. That is why I ask you: are you happy?"

"I have no regrets," she told him steadily.

"That doesn't answer me."

Her eyes wandered beneath his searching glance. She turned away and stared off into the vacancy of the fog.

"How is one to tell?" she said presently. "Isn't happiness difficult to define? A thing of comparative values? . . . I am content, that much I know. I have discovered something in life higher than the gratification of self; I have learned that to serve means more than to be served. I married the man I loved; he needs me now, could hardly do without me. I am a help to him in his work; he would probably be unable to continue it without my assistance. . . . I live my career, as he has his, as you have yours. Who has not? . . . But a year is a long time; I have learned much since . . . She took a deep breath. "Yes," she concluded or, "I can't seem to forget," she said in a tremor. "I've tried—I only wish I might—but I can't. I can't. Remember that, if I seem unkind."

"You haven't been unkind to the man who shot Van Tuyl," he said, in spite of himself.

She did not seem to hear, or, if she heard, to read the riddle in his enigmatic answer. "It isn't that alone," she protested; "that, perhaps, I could forget in time. You weren't yourself; Douglas has always insisted you were not. But, O Garrett, Garrett; it was unmanly, it was unworthy of you to try to shield yourself by accusing him! That I can't forget, that I'm afraid I shall never learn to forgive. Why, Garrett, why did you permit that man Warburton to do it?"

He heard her out in pitiful patience, too deeply moved for anger or resentment to have any place in the conflict of his thoughts.

"As to that," he said, his tone colorless, "I would ask you to suspend judgement if you hadn't already pronounced it. But I leave you this to consider: one of two men only could have killed Van Tuyl. Dundas was except by mutual consent; Blackstock admits and I admit he didn't do it. There remain Blackstock and myself, neither of whom could have been convicted on the other's unsupported evidence."

"You are cowardly to say this to me, when he's not here!"

But he had a level and emotionless look with which to meet the impassioned scorn she showed him.

"Perhaps; but don't forget I asked only the opportunity to say as much to him. . . . Has it ever occurred to you that Dundas, not your husband, sent me to Sing Sing—that, had Dundas been in my pay, Blackstock would now be occupying the cell I occupied?"

He had himself well in hand. Otherwise who must have seen how deeply moved he was. Simply to watch her and not give way was almost more than he could endure. His eyes kindled and his face blazed, and his heart ached—with his love for her, the longing that he must never voice, that she should not see.

She was answering him; her words came in a torrent, standing over one another; her voice vibrant with unutterable contempt, wounded in his hearing like the hounding of angels. "Oh," she cried in loathing—"insufferable!"

And the desire to catch her in his arms and stop her lips with kisses was like a pain. "I never dreamed that man could be so low, so vile!" she said; and he wished himself beneath the foot she stamped, "I hate you!" she told him; and beneath his breath he whispered over and over: "I love you, I love you!"

"I ask nothing," he said, when she had to stop, as much for lack of words as breath, "more than that you think it over. You've told me what you think of me—and I dare say you're somewhat justified. But think it over; you owe me and you owe yourself that. Weigh the worst you know of me before Van Tuyl was shot against what you have learned of Blackstock since you married him; then judge between us. Try to think which would be the more likely to lose his temper because of a drunken man's unmanly insolence. At best you'll admit it's his word against mine, Dundas's word deciding. And one way or another Dundas was a perjurer; first his testimony convicted me, then his testimony set me free."

"What do you mean by that?" she demanded, impressed in spite of herself.

"Dundas," he explained patiently, "committed suicide in the Tomb a few days ago, after making a confession that he had testified falsely at my trial. On the strength of that confession I was pardoned by the Governor. You understand?"

Her face was ghastly. "You bought that confession," she asserted, between set teeth.

He smiled painfully. "I presume I might have anticipated that."

"You dare't deny you bought it!"

"From a man contemplating suicide?"

"Angry? With you?"

She was twisting her hands together.

She kept her face averted.

"I think I may say I am happy, Garrett."

But she kept her face averted.

"And this?" he asked, stopping to her side and lightly touching her bare forearm with his finger.

Just below her left elbow four marks, like bluish stripes set close together, stood out like weals upon her delicate skin, where the flesh had been bruised by the cruel pressure of a man's strong fingers.

At his touch she recoiled with a half-titled cry, her face blazing. "Don't—don't!" she gasped, trying with faltering fingers to pull down the sleeve. But realizing that it was too late, that he had already seen, she recovered, suddenly leaving the sleeve as it was.

"I'm sorry," said Coast soberly; "I didn't mean to touch you. I didn't think—had forgotten what—that I may not expect you to forget. Only . . . that is his mark, Katherine."

"Well," she flashed defiantly, "and what if it is? Is he, or am I, answerable to you? Can he not touch me . . . But his undeviating and penetrating gaze disconcerted her; her anger rang unconvincing even to herself. "It was an accident," she finished lamely. "One of the servants angered him—they are Chinese and stupid—and in his blindness he mistook me for the man and caught my arm."

"It must have hurt," said Coast, trying to believe her.

She was silent, facing him with a trace of bravado. He bowed.

"I beg your pardon; it was, as you suggest, none of my affair. I merely happened to notice, and it startled me. Will you be good enough to tell me the way to the bench?"

Silently the woman indicated a path leading away from the gate.

Still he lingered, letting his eyes drink their fill of her; and know, in a swift flash of certitude, that never had she been more dear to him than in this moment of renunciation, that never would his heart's allegiance waver from her, whatever her mood or circumstance. Whether she suffered him or as now sedulously discountenanced him, his question could do no wrong.

With a sigh, inaudible, he went to the gate.

"There's nothing I can serve you in, Katherine."

"Nothing—only go away."

"Then good-by." He shrugged slightly, lifted his cap and put himself outside the doorway.

"But, Garrett—"

He stopped. She moved down to the fence.

"Garrett," she begged, breathless with the anxiety roused by an unexpected latent fear, "promise me something."

He looked down into her sweet face, plaintive with appeal. "Name it," said he.

"If by any chance you should meet him—Dundas—I'm not sure where he is—don't please—"

"I'll be careful," he assured her. "Don't worry; I shan't let him know who I am. If possible, I'll keep out of his way."

Her eyes were eloquent of inexpressible relief. "Thank you," she faltered, keenly alive to the true inadequacy of the words. "And, Garrett, you're not—not angry with me?"

"Angry? With you?"

She was twisting her hands together.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Gazette, Wednesday, September 13, 1871.

Southern Wisconsin Fair—Opening Day.

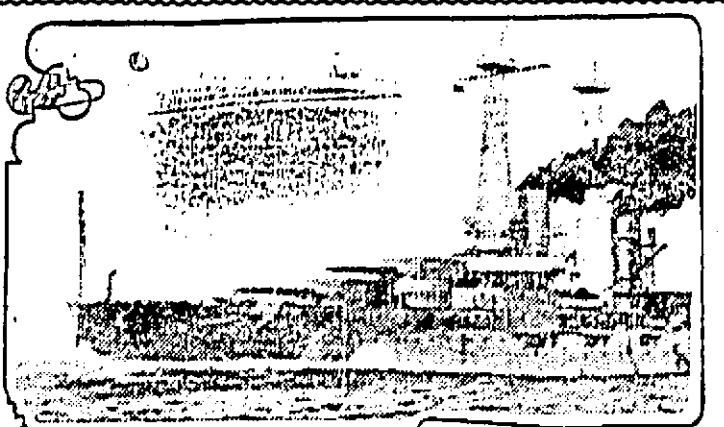

A cloudy morning gave indications of a rain, but as the sun mounted brighter in the sky its warm rays dissolved the gathering moisture till but a thin, vapory film remained to shield the earth from the direct attacks of the sunbeams. A greater portion of today has been taken up in arranging the exhibits, placing machinery and signaling stock to their quarters, but during the next two days of the fair the attention of the spectators will be undiverted by the busy scenes of preparation which has characterized the opening of the exhibition.

During the forenoon the attendance in the town of Wisconsin, lately, A. of visitors was not large, as it was generally understood that arrangements ments on the grounds were not fully completed, but after dinner had been comfortably disposed of the crowds of people which thronged the streets began to move in the direction of the grounds.

Hon. C. C. Washburn, the Republican nominee for Governor, arrived in town this afternoon. Senator Carpenter is expected on the 7:20 train this evening. We wish to suggest that as Mr. Doolittle, the democratic candidate, is to speak in the Opera House this evening, whether it would not be well for the Republicans of this city to hold a meeting at the same place tomorrow evening.

NEAR SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT TARGET PRACTICE.

Battleship Delaware and diagram showing the position of Texas and Ohio during the target practice. The Delaware was firing at the target, Texas, when suddenly, without warning, one of her gunners on the after turret opened fire on the battleship Ohio.

Norfolk, Virginia.—Officers and men on the battleship Ohio are still thanking their good fortune that owing to poor marksmanship on the part of one gunner the Ohio was not sunk at the recent target practice. The near accident occurred while the battleship Delaware was firing broadside after broadside into the target battleship Texas, ten miles distant. The battleship Ohio had withdrawn to what was supposed to be a safe distance from the target battleship. Suddenly, the after turret of the Delaware opened fire and through a mistake on the part of some gunner, a 12-inch shell of the Delaware was directed against the Ohio instead of the Texas. The first shell whistled close to the Ohio, a mile away. Immediately signals were run up frantically ordering "cease firing," but before the order could be received at the Delaware a second 12-inch shell struck so close to the Ohio that it splashed the water on her decks. It is unexplainable how any gunner could have made this mistake.
